TURN IN YOUR JUNK FOR WAR

The steel mills of the nation have less than a ten day's supply of scrap material on hand, according to the Washington announcement. Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, emphasized the gravity of the situation. R. W. Wolcott, chairman of the salvage committee, reports that the country this year will produce five million tons less steel than capacity because of the inadequacy of the supplies of scrap in the hands of the steel mills. When steel capacity drops even one per cent per year, he warned, the country is losing the equivalent of 140 cargo ships of 10,000 tons each. A spokesman for the war department said, "We haven't won this war yet and we'll be a long time winning it. This time it's not a question of how long, but if."

Steel is the very life blood of our war effort. If the supply of steel fails, or its flow is ever so slightly checked, the whole war machine slows down. The country has called millions of its youth into war service and more millions will be recruited this year and next for duty in the army, navy, or flying corps. They will constitute the finest fighting force on earth, but they might as well be back home on their civilian jobs if America fails down on the job of supplying them with fighting tools. Without steel these tools cannot be made and sent to the front, and the supply of steel, if it is to be maintained at capacity flow, requires every ounce of raw material the nation can supply.

The situation has become so acute that the country has made its first direct appeal to the press of the country to promote a campaign appealing to the people to turn in every pound of scrap on their premises. These is hardly a home, farm or business at which the owner cannot ransack around for the things you overlooked the first time. Steel is the most vital of all war materials. If we fail down on production it may mean defeat, and at the best it will mean a longer and more desperate and costly struggle before we can march down the victory road. Do your part by turning in every piece of scrap you can find in order that our steel mills can be kept operating at capacity —From Bedford Bulletin.

BRITAIN'S EXAMPLE

With the enemy only twenty miles across the Channel, England has been turning in an astounding production performance. While the United States builds more and more of the Allied bombers and the British concentra's on fighter planes that cannot be flown such distances as across the Atlantic, British plane production has doubled in one year and is now believed to equal Germany's.

The new British Sterlings carry eight tons of bombs, even more than the American Boeing Flying Fortresses. The rate of tank production is twice the rate of a year ago, and five times the rate of two years ago. Forty thousand big guns and 25,000,000 rounds of ammunition for them are being turned out each year, as are millions of small arms and 2,000,000,000 rounds of small ammunition.

Six thousand small shops, many of them underground in quarries, make tank parts sufficient to send 3,000 tanks overseas from the United Kingdom in 1943. There are 5,500,000 women in war work, and unmarried women from twenty to thirty may be drafted. Seven of every ten children from fourteen to seventeen are among the two of every three United Kingdom citizens who are in some full-time war activity.

Fifty-two per cen' of British income now goes to war expenditures. Workers and employers have sacrificed peacetime rights to insure maximum production. In essential industry, 8,000,000 workers can not quit jobs or be dismissed except by government permission. Working time lost in labor disputes since Dunkerque is less than one hour a worker a year.

Rationing limits (weekly individual) consumption to two ounces of butter, two ounces of tea, and no gasoline for pleasure driving. No luxuries are produced. Six million acres are under the plow to double domestic food production. In two years Britain has become the most highly mechanized farming country in Europe.

Twelve thousand five hundred medium tanks have been made from 200,000 tons of iron railings. A house-to-house salvage netted 1,000,000 tons of scrap to build destroyers. There is a black-out every night. Every man between eighteen and one-half and fifty-one is drafted. There's what Britain is doing in the effort to conquer the conquering Hun. —From The Winchester Star.

SPARE YOUR DOCTOR

War's drain on the nation's doctors continues to grow rapidly. In time, it is likely that all physically fit younger doctors, and many older doctors, will be called into the military service. And so, the burden of work on the doctors who remain at home will be doubled and redoubled.

Many authorities are now advising the public as to how it may help these doctors perform their job with maximum efficiency under difficult conditions. First, don't ask your doctor to make a house call if you are able to go to his office. Second, don't call him at inconvenient times unless there is an emergency. Third, when you do see him, don't waste his time in gossip and idle talk. It may be all right to "visit" with the doctor in normal times—it is definitely a bad practice. now.

The standards of American medical care are the highest in the world. During the war, with a shortage of people working at arduous labor, every possible means of guarding and maintaining these standards must be used, and you can be certain that the doctors will do their part. They will willingly work longer and harder. They won't spare themselves. They know better than anyone else that the preservation of civilian health is absolutely vital to the war effort.

The patient who wastes a doctor's time may, unwittingly, be depriving a person who desperately needs it, of medical attention. Spare your doctor! —Exchange.

TELLING US THE TRUTH

Ambassador Grew, just back from Japan by way of a diplomatic ship, is telling us the truth about the wily Japs. He says that the Japs are a tough people and that their morale will never crack. He also tells us that the Japs regard us as a "flabby" people, unwilling to give up our SOFT way of living in order to wage total war the hard way.

We thoroughly agree that many of us have made no sacrifice as yet for the war effort. But by and large, we blame the general lack of skill for leather enthusiasm on Washington. Ask men like Senator Byrd about the Washington muddle.

It is our belief that the people are ready and anxious to do anything to hurry up and win the war. But the people dislike to be pushed around and treated like children.

General Hershey comes out each week with a different version of who is to be drafted, and when. We have been told a dozen different versions of the rubber and gas situations. As much as we like Cordell Hull, our State Department has muddled along in hit-or-miss fashion and there has been so far nothing like the tonic, clarion clear, of the war addresses of Woodrow Wilson. Washington seems lost in a mire of red tape and confusion.

Mr. Grow is telling us the truth.

JUDAH: AN EXAMPLE OF SELF-SACRIFICE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 44:18-34.
GOLDEN TEXT—Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.—I John 3:16.

The family is still the fundamental unit of society, and is therefore of more importance than the church, the state, or the social order of which it is a vital part. Every force which encourages the breakdown of the sacred relationships of the home and family is set for the destruction of society itself.

Men have too often chosen to go the way of the flesh, and therefore they have disregarded God's plan and purpose. But marriage is just as sacred as ever in His sight; the home is to be kept for Him; and brotherly love still finds a high place among the virtues of real men.

Today's lesson is a continuation of the story of Joseph's life. As we study it we must bear in mind Joseph's brothers, and brethren, who as yet did not recognize him as the one they had sold into captivity. He was bringing them kindness, but definitely to the point of real repentance, so that he could show himself gracious to them.

I. Trouble and brought disaster upon them. Being happily on their way homeward with a new supply of food, they were overtaken and proved to be thieves, and Benjamin, the beloved of their father Jacob, stood condemned by their own words, to death.

Let us trust the mouths of the others seemed closed, but Judah, who had really saved Joseph's life (Gen. 37:26, 27) and who had apparently come to himself as a man of essential goodness, pleaded for Benjamin's life. That plea presented a most sacrificial brotherly love, as he manifested

I. Courage (v. 18).
Easy rests the yoke of family life as long as all is joyful and prosperous. But when adversity strikes, when sorrow comes, or sickness, or sin, then the true test of devotion is at hand.

It was a brave and manly thing for Judah to stand before the one whom he knew only as the man who was "even as Pharaoh." The circumstances were all against him. He expected the flaming anger of the offended ruler. His brethren had collapsed in despair. It was one of those dark hours which come to every family when someone must demonstrate true love by being strong-hearted and steady.

II. Intelligence (vv. 19-29).
Crises call for more than a cheerful smile or an encouraging word, much as they may mean in such an hour. We must be prepared by our close contact with our loved ones to speak and act with vigor and assurance.

Judah's plea is a masterpiece of argumentation and appeal, demonstrating that he was thoroughly well-informed about his family and its problems, but ready to use his knowledge skillfully and effectively.

III. Self-Denial (vv. 30-33).
One step deeper goes the devotion of this man to his father and his brother. He had done no wrong that merited punishment, but evidently his brother Benjamin had been guilty. Had he been of the spirit of Cain he would have said, "Am I my brother's keeper?" and let him answer for himself. Why should Judah suffer for another? Why should he allow himself to be imprisoned in a strange land to save his father from sorrow and his brother from what seemed to be the just reward for his deeds?

Thus reasons the man of the world, but such is not the language of the true brother, who says, "Let thy servant abide instead of the lad as a bondman."

IV. Love (v. 34).
Love for father and brother underlies all of the courage, conviction and self-sacrifice of a man like Judah. In his younger years, and possibly under the influence of his brothers, he had failed in that respect, but now his real devotion to his brother was evident.

That affection was a real, powerful, and beautiful thing, and yet it is but a faint prefiguring of the affection of the One who "sticketh closer than a brother," who "though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich" (Prov. 18: 24; II Cor. 8:9).

Let us improve the opportunity to revise our relations with our own family, to determine whether there is aught that we in intelligent and courageous self-sacrifice should do for our own.

★ FASHION PREVIEW ★

From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

WILL FROTT dropped over last evening and we had a glass of beer on the back porch. I could see Will was bustin' to say something . . .

"Well," he finally remarks, holding up his glass to the light of the settin' sun, "I paid my income tax today—third installment."

There was a note of pride in Will's voice that some folks might have found amusing—if they didn't know Will . . .

Wasn't amusing to me though. I happen to know this is the first year Will's filed an income tax return, and I suspect the payment wasn't very big . . . probably in the general neighborhood of $3.26. But I know how it made him feel . . .

Made him feel good . . . because he was doing his part as an American citizen . . . holding up his end.

Made him feel proud . . . to mail that money direct to Uncle Sam—for things that's needed to win this war with.

That's the way Will would feel about bein' able to pay income taxes . . . kind of citizen he is.

And speakin' of taxes . . . I read the other day that during the nine years since beer came back, beer taxes have brought in more than two and a half billion dollars to the government.

Then it went on to say that the beer industry provides more than a million dollars a day in taxes. Some of that's federal, some's state and some's local. But any way you describe it, it's a lot of money.

Right here in Virginia, for instance, the taxes from beer last year were enough to pay for fifteen 4-engine bombers, fifty-four fighter airplanes, or eighty-one medium tanks.

(And it wasn't so long ago a lot of that money was going into pockets of bootleggers and gangsters.)

"There," I thought to myself when I saw Will holding his glass up to the light, "there are two Americans that pay their war . . . Will Frost and beer."

REGULATION TO FIX THE BAG LIMIT FOR QUAIL; TO PROHIBIT BOTH GUN OR RIFLE AND DOG IN CERTAIN AREAS DURING THE CLOSED SEASON; TO REGULATE POSSESSION OF FIREARMS IN CERTAIN AREAS; TO ADOPT FEDERAL REGULATIONS AS TO MIGRATORY BIRDS AND TO FIX THE OPEN SEASON FOR TRAPPING OTTER

Pursuant to a proposal authorized by his commission August 7, 1942, and published as required by law, the following regulations were adopted at a meeting in Richmond, Va., September 4, 1942:

It shall be unlawful to hunt with either a gun or a dog in National forest areas during the general closed hunting season. It shall be unlawful to have both shotgun, or rifle, and dog in the daytime in the fields, forests or waters of the counties of Augusta, Clarke, Frederick, Page, Shenandoah and Warren and in counties east of the Blue Ridge mountains, except in Patrick, during the general closed hunting season, except were animal game birds, other than doves, deer, bear and fox may be hunted during other periods of the year and except as to hunting rabbits and squirrels by owners upon their own lands. The foregoing shall be subject to the provision that it shall be unlawful to have in possession any firearms in a National forest area during the general closed hunting season, except that this provision shall not apply to persons holding permits from the commission authorizing possession in such National forest areas or to officers of the peace while actually engaged in the performance of their duties as such, or to persons transporting firearms across such lands if such firearms are unloaded and cased or otherwise dismantled. For the purpose hereof the word "possession" shall include having a gun in one's car or other conveyance while on the above mentioned area.

The bag limit on quail shall not exceed 10 a day, 125 a season.

The open season and bag limits for hunting migratory game birds for the season 1942-43, as issued by the Federal government, including possession, shall be adopted.

The open season for trapping otter shall be the same as provided for trapping muskrat.

These regulations shall become effective September 15, 1942.

By order of the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries.
